

REFINERY29

How To Do NYC Like A French Girl

861 SHARES

24 COMMENTS

SEE ALL SLIDES

SEP 21, 2014 11:00 PM
CARRIE HOJNICKI

Beauty products. Fashion. Cuisine. Don't the French always seem to do everything better? And, while we may not have a one-way ticket to the City of Lights at our disposal, there's no denying we can all use a little dose of la vie Parisienne — be it a dozen macarons or the latest issue of Vogue Paris — every now and then.

New York City is a multicultural mecca, so it's no surprise there are little doses of French culture hiding behind every corner, from the freshest baguettes this side of the Atlantique, to where to find those beauty products normally only available at pharmacies overseas. We've rounded up some major cafés, boutiques, and theaters that will satisfy your Parisian cravings — no boarding pass required.

Maison Kayser

The baguettes from Parisian bakery Maison Kayser, which received the coveted "Best Baguette" nod from New York Magazine in 2013, are perfectly crusty-yet-soft masterpieces. One bite, and you will forget you live in New York.

Maison Kayser, 921 Broadway (at East 21st Street); 212-979-1600.

September 21, 2014
www.refinery29.com